INTRODUCTORY NOTE

This hand-list is a guide to Buckinghamshire private estate maps earlier than 1862. There is much variety. One shows the roads of the north of the county in the reign of Elizabeth I, another gives a town plan house by house, and many throw light on field systems; some are simple plans made for particular lawsuits, while others record the territorial possessions of great landowners, with lengthy reference tables and elaborate decoration. My aim is to give the usual details and to indicate as briefly as possible the type of information which can be obtained from each map. Particulars have been summarized under six headings: (1) date; (2) subject; (3) dimensions and scale (in inches to the mile unless otherwise stated); (4) surveyor; (5) remarks; (6) owner or place of deposit and reference number. Imprecise or doubtful statements are in square brackets. Where originals are inaccessible or cannot be traced, copies have been included.

In 1961, the County Record Office published a list of all its maps and I am most grateful to Mr E. J. Davis, the Archivist, for allowing me to reproduce particulars from it and for the help which he and Mr A. G. Veysey, the Assistant Archivist, have so readily given me. The Stowe Collection in the Huntington Library in California contains a large number of estate maps of which Miss Jean Preston of the Department of MSS. has kindly sent me very full details. I should also like to give special thanks to Mr P. I. King, the Northamptonshire County Archivist. Indeed many people have gone to great trouble to show me maps, often too large for any ordinary table and needing heavy weights to keep them flat. Thanks for their kindness and interest are due to the private owners and their agents, and to the archivists and librarians of institutions, listed below. Finally, I wish to thank the General Editor for giving me this task and for his help and encouragement.

Where possible, I have examined the maps myself and I am responsible for any errors. I should be glad to know of additions and corrections which ought to be made and of any other estate maps which could be included in a supplement. Many more must have survived in muniment rooms and estate offices and perhaps less suitable places.
